Hygiene of the eyelashes, eyelash roots and eyelid edge is important for dry and sensitive eyes and contact lenses wearers, and for anyone experiencing meibomian gland dysfunction.

The eyelids have glands, meibomian glands, which produce meibum, a fatty component of the tear film that prevents tears from evaporating.

If these glands don't work properly, they can cause dry eyes, by retaining meibum and reducing its flow, or an infection on the eyelid edge, blepharitis.
